

Building 20 is part of the Roybal campus master plan. It's called the CDC Operations Support and Lifestyle Facility. The new, five-story building includes office space and a fitness center.

No Sweat! Kathy Nellis gets a sneak peek at the sauna before the opening of the new building and Lifestyle center. Photo by Angie Fugo

Greg Rosser fields a phone call as he prepares to check the sound system. The Lifestyle Center has eight different music sources, so while you are listening to something mellow in a quiet room, the folks in the aerobics room can be rocking out. Photo by Kathy Nellis

As you lie in the zero gravity chair in the quiet room, you can watch a mood-enhancing light show. The chair takes the stress and pressure off your joints and back. Photo by Kathy Nellis

All photographs and captions on this page are from Wednesday, July 19, 2006, CDC Connects story, "CDC Practices What It Preaches"